

NGFA 118th

ANNUAL CONVENTION

A Tradition of Community, A Future of Growth

A Tradition of Community, A Future of Growth From the Chairman

It's a pleasure to welcome all members and guests to the National Grain and Feed Association's (NGFA) 118th annual convention.

I especially want to welcome all new members and first-time attendees. It's great to have all of you here, and I encourage you to participate actively!

A special welcome, too, to NGFA committee apprentices who are attending their first convention! How wonderful it is to see these talented newer representatives from NGFA-member companies get involved in NGFA's committee system.

We're also pleased to welcome members and executive staff from the North American Export Grain Association (NAEGA), who are joining us for their annual meeting. The NGFA and NAEGA are co-located in Washington. The mutual collaboration and synergy that this arrangement facilitates helps our industry address a broader range of major policy issues than would be possible otherwise, helping us meet the industry's global strategic objectives. It's a model for other trade associations in how to best serve their industry sectors.

This year's convention theme – A Tradition of Community, A Future of Growth – captures the essence and spirit of the NGFA, its members and the industry in which we're blessed to work. We're both colleagues and competitors, and work through this great Association to advance the common interests of our industry. And the policies and programs we pursue are all about growth – economic advancement for U.S. agriculture, professional development and training for those who work in our industry, and expanded production of grains, oilseeds, meat, milk and eggs to meet growing global demand and provide food security for world consumers.

Achieving those goals doesn't come by chance. Many of you work tirelessly in the NGFA's "vineyards," serving in leadership positions on the NGFA Board of Directors, as committee chairs and committee members, as elected leaders or executive staff members of State and Regional Grain and Feed Associations, and in countless other capacities. I want to extend my sincere thanks, on behalf of your fellow industry members, for your dedicated service in proactively addressing the myriad issues that this great Association is called upon to tackle for the benefit of the industry.

What an exciting time to be in this business of providing abundant and affordable grain-based food, feed, biofuels and exports to world consumers! To succeed requires that we achieve pro-growth policies, a regulatory environment that does not overly burden business efficiency and a federal financial situation that is sound and sustainable over the long term. I believe that achieving these objectives will demand an even greater commitment from each of us to become more actively and directly involved in our nation's political process – a theme that will permeate this convention.

I encourage you to take advantage of all this convention has to offer. A good start is to attend and participate in the many open committee meetings to learn first-hand – and to provide your input – on the major issues that will affect our businesses in the year ahead. You'll find committee meetings scheduled on Sunday afternoon, as well as Monday and Tuesday mornings. The major agenda topics for each committee are listed in the program so you can pick those that have the most interest and relevance to you and your business. As an industry-driven Association, the committee structure is the heart-and-soul of our organization.

I also encourage you to attend the major Transportation Open Forum on Sunday afternoon, as well as the outstanding general sessions on Monday and Tuesday. Interacting with our convention speakers, exchanging ideas with your industry colleagues and enjoying these beautiful surroundings with your friends and family are integral parts of the NGFA convention experience.

Finally, let me thank you for the privilege and honor of having served as NGFA chairman for the past two years. I appreciate all the support you have given me. Yes, we have big challenges ahead that will require even more active involvement from each of us as members. But we also have a great team!

I'm excited to see what the future holds as our "Community" continues to invest time, talent and resources in this great Association.

A Special Thanks to our Convention Sponsors

Foundation Get Involved

Established in 1965, the National Grain and Feed Foundation provides support for public education and research projects that benefit the grain, feed and processing industry, enhance its presence to the public, and position it for future growth.

All administrative support and management expertise for the day-to-day operations of the Foundation are donated by the NGFA. That means 100 percent of funds contributed is directed to research and education. Recent Foundation projects have included:

- Conservation Reserve Program research and analysis.
- Regional safety and health seminars.
- Safe grain bin entry at elevators and on farms.

- Work with the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology, and Animal Agriculture Alliance.

Donations

Donations to the National Grain and Feed Foundation generally qualify as charitable contributions for federal income tax purposes. Donations may be made by individuals, corporations or other foundations with similar goals, and often are made in memory of past industry leaders or colleagues. Contributions should be sent to:

Spouse/Guest Breakfast and Activity

March 31, 9:45-11:30 am

Come watch and learn as Michael Smalls, master Gullah craftsman, demonstrates the art of Gullah basket weaving. He also weaves stories about the Gullah history of Hilton Head Island and the South Carolina Low Country. Smalls is strongly committed to preserving sweet grass basket making. Coming from a family of South Carolina Gullah basket makers, he learned the art from his great grandmother who taught him the basics of "sewing" baskets at the age of eight years old.

He has achieved the status of master craftsman and teacher creating his own work and teaching classes and workshops in his local community and beyond, to preserve the art. His work has appeared in the annual Mt. Pleasant, S.C., sweet grass basket festival; the McKissick Museum basket day festival at the University of Charleston and as part of the Museum for African Art travelling exhibition called Grass Roots: African Origins of an American Art (2008-present), which has appeared at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of African Art and other venues around the United States.

There will be a selection of baskets for purchase after the demonstration.

About the Committees

The committee system of the National Grain and Feed Association is:

- an integral component of the NGFA's structure;
- an important contributor to its strength and effectiveness as a national trade organization; and
- one of the most important benefits provided by the Association to its members.

Comprised of more than 300 dedicated industry volunteers from all types and sizes of member companies, NGFA committees work proactively for the mutual benefit of the industry. They ensure that diverse issues are addressed effectively by a cross section of members who have expertise and experience in the subject matter.

Those serving on NGFA committees also benefit from their involvement. They are on the cutting edge of learning about government policies – usually at the developmental stage – as well as the intricacies of important industry issues and trends. NGFA committee members are in an ideal position to influence the outcome on major issues.
