

Chris Boerm is a leader in the agricultural and transportation sectors, currently serving as the President of Transportation at Archer Daniels Midland Company (ADM), the world's premier agricultural origination and processing company. With a career spanning over three decades at ADM, Chris joined the company in 1991 and has held various merchandising and management positions including Advisor to the Chairman and President, North American Grain.

In addition to his role at ADM, Chris serves as chair of the National Grain and Feed Association and is also an independent board member and chair of the compensation committee at Birkey's Ag, a regional farm equipment dealer. He is on the board of ADM's captive insurance company and has served on several Class I railroad customer advisory boards as well as serving as a director for Kalama Export Company and Pacifcor, LLC. He is a member of ADM's North American Executive Council, ADM's Emergency Response Team, and is the executive sponsor of ADM's Black Colleague Alliance.

Chris holds a bachelor's degree in finance and management from Wartburg College in Waverly, Iowa, and an MBA from Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He has also completed ADM's CEO-led Executive Training program at Harvard Business School.