

Sheryl Wallace is the Chief Executive Officer of Ardent Mills, the premier flour-milling and ingredient company dedicated to transforming how the world is nourished. As CEO, Sheryl leads with a deep belief in the power of food to make a positive impact on people and the planet in the communities. She oversees a broad network of more than 40 locations across the U.S. and Canada, specializing in flour, pulses, organics and gluten-free products. Under her leadership, Ardent Mills continues to expand its role in plant-based and innovative ingredient solutions, helping customers meet evolving consumer needs.

Sheryl brings a clear, forward-looking vision to the company's priorities: protect the long-term viability of the food system through delivering on our purpose of nourishing the world through innovative ingredient solutions, bring Ardent Mills' values to life in what we do, create meaningful opportunities for employees, and collaborate with customers and supply chain partners to support their success.

Prior to Ardent Mills, Sheryl spent more than 28 years at Cargill, where she held a range of leadership positions, including president of U.S. origination and grain, corporate vice president of risk management and global vice president for financial and hedging solutions.

Sheryl serves on the Executive Committee of the North American Millers' Association and previously held positions on the National Grain and Feed Association Executive Committee and Foundation Board, as well as the National Futures Association Board of Directors. She has also been involved with mission-driven organizations such as Feed My Starving Children, Food Bank of the Rockies, Junior Achievement, and the International Club in Geneva, Switzerland.

Sheryl graduated from the University of Minnesota with a bachelor's degree and MBA Essentials in business.
